NEW YORK, Sept. 23 .- J. Pierpont Morgan, jr., has leased a New York house, furnished, for four months, and will spend the winter here.

Mr. Morgan expects to take up the details of the management of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. at the beginning of the new year, when his father will retire from active business, though remaining nominally at the head of the firm for some time. Wall Street heard these facts yesterday, and was not sur-prised thereat, for Mr. Morgan's retirement had been expected for more than

The great financier has paid less and less attention to his business and more to art and charity in the last two years, and it is said he is now willing to shift almost the entire responsibility on his son and upon the other partners, of whom he has ten. An Experienced Banker.

Young Mr. Morgan has had a very thorough training in the banking busi-ness ever since he left college. He beness ever since he left college. He began his apprenticeship under his father's direction in the New York office, where he familiarized himself with every department. He is a young man of much natural ability, and he has received a thorough education. He has none of the bad habits or frivolities that so many son, of rich men develop.

He was always very methodical, and seems to be anxious to fit himself to succeed his father. Among the clerks he was always popular, because of his affability and his democratic ways. In Wall Street he is known as "Jack" urreement has been entered into.

Upon good authority it can be stated the District.

The jury unanimously decided after tearing evidence and argument for two tours and a half that Lyman is a resident and was eligible for service upon be grand jury.

Daniel Harmon, of counsel for the deense, moved that this verdict be set side. Judge Morris refused to enterain this motion.

Court and Counsel Confer.

After the judge had dismissed Mr. side and quash the indictment there was a brief conference between the attorneys, at the end of which Mr. Gilmer said that at the suggestion of the counel for the defense it was deemed advisable to have a conference between the lawyers on both sides with the court relative to certain matters of procedure. Judge Morris expressed his willingness to confer, but asked whether there were to be any more motions necessitating the presence of a jury. Both Mr. Harmon and Mr. Lee, of counsel for the defense, assured him that there would be none and the jury was accordingly discharged. Court at once adjourned and the judge and the lawyers went into conference.

Later it was announced that on the motion of the counsel for the defense, agreed to by the prosecuting attorneys, the case would be equitinued over until awyers on both sides with the court

VERDICT OF THE PETIT JURY WILL RELIEVE CONGESTION

In view of the fact that McCue has not yet been arraigned upon the indictment presented by the grand jury on Monday there is much speculation as to what ent congestion in the public schools of that while there will not be any starting developments in the case on Tuesday, enough will take place to show that there will be no time lost now in beginning the real trial.

Stubborn Contest Expected.

Once into that it is fully expected that every foot of ground will be stubbornly contested by the counsel for the accused. It promises to be one of the most sensational trials ever held in a Virginia count.

The ongestion is not considered scriptous at any point save in the McKinley Manual Training School. Here, say the officials, the overcrowding and congestion, with a consequent naif-day plan for each pupil, call for instant relief. The records show that last year there were thirty schools which were so crowded that the half-day plan had to be adopted. That is, half the pupils went to school in the morning, going home at midday, in order to give the other half the use of the class rooms, which were, too small to accommodate all at once.

Reduced to Twelve.

This year, it is calculated, there will be only twelve schools laboring under this disadvantage. All these figures relate to schools above the second grade

With the schools of the arst and second grades, it has been, and probably will be, the rule to have half-day sessions, as the children are too young to be benefited by long sessions.

The sum of $125,000 is desired to add to the McKinley school enough space to accommodate its pupils. The original plans of the building contemplated an addition that would cost the sum mentioned, but Congress has persistently recused to make the necessary appropriation for two years. This year, it is thought, the money will be forthcoming as the conditions there are such as to call for immediate remedy.

At present the class rooms accommodate only about 250 pupils while the shops have space for about 450. The desire of the authorities is to have as much class room as shop room so that the pupils will not be obliged to go to school only a half day.

General Conditions Good.

General Conditions Good.

With the exception of the McKinley chool, the general conditions are considered good by the school officials. The District now owns 130 school buildings, of which ninety-one are two-story structures, and twenty-eight three-story buildings. Twelve other buildings are rented for school purposes. In asking for a new school at Brightwood Park, though the school at Brightwood is not seriously overcrowded, it is thought by the authorities a good plan to have a separate school for the children of Brightwood Park. In Georgetown a new structure is asked to relieve the Curtis School, which is crowded, but not in a serious degree. A new building is desired for the negrochildren of Southwest Washington.
